Te Rēinga

Also known as Te Rerenga Wairua, Cape Reinga is an important place for the Maori people of the North Island.

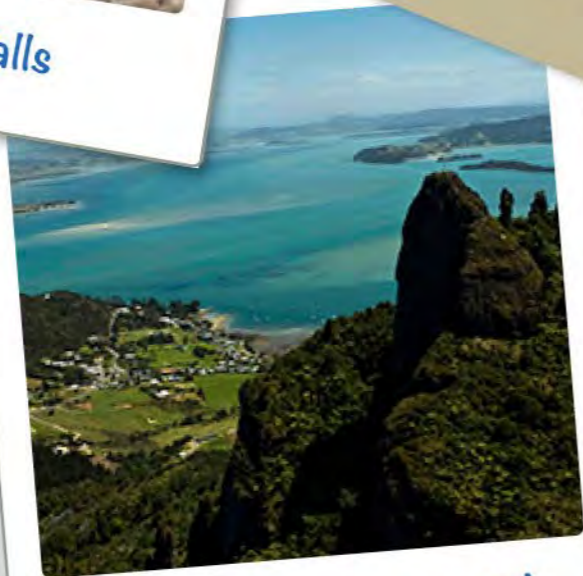

It is believed to be the leaping place or place of departure for the spirits of people passed away.

The spirits travel from the physical world under the sea and after crossing a river ascend to heaven to be absorbed by the universe.

Whāngarei

Whangarei is a rock (Castle Rock/ Mt Manaia) opposite Marsden Point, where sentries kept watch over the harbour. This version of the name means 'to lie in wait'.

In another version 'whanga' means harbour, and 'rei' to cherish. A lovelorn woman, Reipae, waited for her lover but when he did not come, she gave up hope and married another.
